The Conquest of America

by Kenneth W. Behrendt

Readers who have followed my past articles (see "The Final Battle of the Three Pyramids" in CT #3 and "The Conquest of Russia in CT #8) realize that we are now in the middle of a planetary/mind war between capitalism and communism. I have likened the "open" forces of capitalism to a giant blue social pyramid and the "closed" forces of communism to a giant red social pyramid. From a variety of sources, it becomes possible to predict that by the mid-1990's the blue pyramid will eventually destroy the red pyramid, yet the blue pyramid will then rapidly disintegrate so that by the year 1998 a new world order will exist in which the survivors of this combat will finally have true freedom and dignity.

While the blue pyramid is now busily preparing for a devastating "first strike" on the Soviet Union and her satellites using the newly developed technology copied from our extraterrestrial visitors, it is most certainly the case that the red pyramid is, likewise, preparing its own surprise attack against the blue pyramid. It is also safe to assume that both pyramids now have, at least, approximate ideas of the form that each others attacks will take and are in a race to see which side can deliver the decisive blow first. Past readers of my articles now know that the blue pyramid will use an attack depending upon the ability of triangular, UFO like vehicles to deliver exotic and very powerful liquid explosives to strategic military targets at ground level within the territorial borders of the red pyramid. The resulting explosions will then render ineffective the nuclear missile arsenal of the red pyramid. But what form of attack will the red pyramid try to launch against the blue pyramid? Surprising as it may seem, their secret plans are completely different in nature, far more subtle, and potentially more deadly than those of the blue pyramid!

The military elite of the red pyramid are not really technologically oriented as are their opposite numbers in the blue pyramid. They do not really trust their defense to equipment as much as we do and would never seriously consider a manned penetration of the territory of the United States or her immediate hemispheric allies. Of the 180 divisions possessed by the USSR about 33.3% are reservists, 33.3% are officers, and only 33.3% are actual combat troops in any state of readiness to invade other countries. The latter third are fully employed with guarding the red pyramid's borders with China and western Europe. The red pyramid, therefore, is determined to control the world and make it safe for communism through the use of nuclear blackmail, bribery, and assassination. They are committed to this course because they have reached the conclusion that the only way the Marxist/Leninist economic and social policies can ever be realized in practice is if the entire world is hard at work implementing these policies (it is easier for them to believe this than that their policies might be erroneous!). Of the 170 nations on earth, the red pyramid now effectively controls about 140 since the 1917 revolution. Third world countries in poverty are easily controlled with bribery/assassination and these account for much of the red pyramid's success, yet the remaining game pieces they need to control are ones that can directly retaliate with nuclear exchanges and will be the hardest for them to conquer. So, we now see the problem the red pyramid faces: to gain complete control of earth, it must gain control of the blue pyramid by neutralizing its nuclear forces, yet must accomplish this without a direct manned attack.

Readers will be forgiven if they read the above and reach the immediate conclusion that the task the red pyramid has before it is a physical impossibility and that they are doomed...yet, suppose there was a way of rendering the remaining entrenched forces of the blue pyramid totally ineffective? What if the method of accomplishing this was already well developed by the red pyramid and almost ready for use in a surprise attack on the blue pyramid? Based on the history of the development of western technology in this century and certain recent and highly anomalous events, I now believe that I can give the reader a fairly accurate analysis of just what form the red pyramid's own surprise attack will take.

To begin, we must return to the early decades of this century and consider an interesting device invented by a man named Hubbard (no relation to L. Ron Hubbard). In 1919, Hubbard demonstrated two devices he called "self-sustaining electric generators" in Seattle, Washington. The smaller of his two cylindrical gadgets was 6 inches long and about 5 inches in diameter. Four wires ran from the device into a small box with an electrical outlet built into it and a small knob. This device was thoroughly tested and could operate appliances such as electrical lights and toasters. The second larger device he demonstrated before crowds was about 14 inches long and 11 inches in diameter. It was taken into a small boat and connected to a 40 horsepower electric motor. The boat was successfully driven around the bay of the city for many hours before onlookers grew bored and departed.

The important thing to realize about this invention is that it managed to energize electrical devices, yet did so without the use of any conventional source of power! Although Hubbard would not reveal the operating principle of his device, it was examined by responsible observers who proclaimed that it was most definitely not a hoax and was working via a revolutionary new principle. Shortly before he disappeared from public view, Hubbard told a reporter that the invention literally "pulled power out of the air". This invention was never patented and little was heard from Hubbard again!

Via network synthesis, the author now has a complete circuit diagram for the Hubbard generator, but will not publish it now, for its release would, most probably cause the blue/red pyramid intelligence elite who routinely monitor publications such as this to take immediate action to interfere with this publication and I am not sure that I want them to yet know how advanced my own research is in this area. Suffice it to say that the Hubbard device was (is) a simple tunable, feedback oscillator circuit designed to receive and accumulate Extreme Low Frequency radio waves that are continuously emitted by our planet's ionosphere. Because the gas atoms in this layer of the atmosphere are continuously bombarded by the solar wind and kept ionized and in violent motion, they emit considerable quantities of ELF electromagnetic energy that can be received at ground level by appropriate circuitry such as Hubbard developed. In particular, energy emitted by the ionosphere's F2 layer at an altitude of 186 miles is used. This ELF has a wavelength of about 744 miles and a frequency of only 250 cycles per second or Hertz.

Nikola Tesla was a contemporary of Hubbard and also very much interested in electrical devices that could transmit energy from a central station to its points of usage without the need for intermediate wiring. In his pursuit of this he developed many sophisticated devices that could transmit and receive electromagnetic energy over a wide variety of frequencies. Before his death in 1943, Tesla had conceived of a variety of inventions which would operate in a fashion identical to the earlier ones of Hubbard. In particular, Tesla came to realize that not only could he tap, at will, the enormous powers of our planet's ionosphere, but could control the frequencies it emitted by carefully exciting it with certain "control frequencies" from ground based radio transmitters. He had, in effect, discovered the principle of the laser almost twenty years ahead of its formal discovery and knew how to make our ionosphere behave like the laser material! He was confidently predicting that his research would deliver inexhaustible quantities of electrical energy to mankind and would eventually allow us to completely control earth's weather patterns! When his business partners learned of his plans, every effort was made to neutralize these unprofitable discoveries and Tesla was eventually reduced to such a level of poverty that he could no longer conduct research or patent his discoveries...he finally died in obscurity.

Soon after the blue pyramid detonated two nuclear weapons over Japanese cities, the red pyramid suddenly realized just how vulnerable it was to a fatal attack by the United States. In conjunction with the development of its own nuclear weapons program, it greatly upgraded its pool of espionage agents and sent them throughout the world in search of any and all scientific discoveries which might allow the red pyramid to survive if it was unable to develop its own nuclear weapons. Their agents soon discovered the unpublished notebooks of Tesla and, at all costs, managed to return them to the Soviet Union for the most minute of analyses. This retrieval during the mid-1950's was carried out with such suddenness and precision that the blue pyramid could not prevent the theft of this material. Perhaps the blue pyramid's intelligence elite made the critical mistake of assuming that Tesla was just a harmless crackpot whose work would be of no value to the red pyramid.

By the early 1970's the red pyramid had completed the construction of a string of carefully positioned ELF transmitter stations inside the Soviet Union. Each station can generate a variety of ELF with enormous powers of 500 kilowatts to 1000 kilowatts and the signals from the different stations can be emitted in precise phase relationships to the signals of the other stations. The blue pyramid intelligence elite at first thought these stations were designed to allow the red pyramid to maintain communication with its submarine forces (ELF readily penetrate sea water), but the power of these stations is far beyond what is needed for this purpose. It was then reasoned that the Soviets were playing around with crude attempts to modify weather by altering the concentration of ions in the air near the stations; perhaps they were merely trying to de-fog fog shrouded airport runways or lengthen the growing season by raising the average temperature of the more temperate regions of the USSR.

The actual purposes of these stations, however, are far more sinister. The carefully phased signals from this network of stations are designed to "constructively interfere" in regions of the earth's ionosphere that overlay particular parts of the earth. The region of ionosphere thus affected may be only several tens of miles in diameter and the location of the region(s) of ionosphere affected is precisely determined by the phase relationships between the emitted signals. If the ionosphere is stimulated to release energy as fast as it accumulates it from the solar wind, that region of the ionosphere can deionize and allow lethal levels of ultraviolet radiation from the sun to shine through to destroy a nation's crops or populace. A less dramatic effect occurs when the region affected has the natural frequencies of the ELF it emits altered by the control frequencies that constructively interfere there from the red pyramid transmitters. If other than the natural frequency of 250 Hertz strikes the lower atmosphere and soil of a nation, the result may be a drought or excessive flooding. Wildlife populations may be shifted and fishing affected. In short, the red pyramid forces are, even now, conducting research which will allow them to, by merely pressing a few buttons, control the food supplies of billions of people and they may comfortably monitor the entire process via surveillance satellites!

There is now some evidence to indicate that the Soviets have made many attempts to "steer" hurricanes onto selected areas of the continental United States by carefully altering the ionization levels of the air along the path that the red pyramid wishes the hurricane to follow! Efforts are now underway to actually create hurricanes and tornadoes, but their ability to do this is limited since the levels of energy present in such meteorological phenomena are, fortunately, beyond what can be drawn from our ionosphere.

If the above were all that the red pyramid forces could utilize in a surprise attack, then they would indeed pose little threat to the blue pyramid. However, there is yet another effect the communists are counting on in their upcoming all out attack against capitalism. As was seen earlier in this article, Hubbard was able to receive ELF electromagnetic radiation from our ionosphere which had a frequency of only 250 cycles per second and he had to have a special circuit to do this. What would happen if one could alter the natural frequency of this ionospheric emission so that it was only 60 cycles per second? With the appropriately selected control frequencies constructively interfering in a selected region of the ionosphere, it would be an easy matter to bombard the region of the earth below that portion of the sky with ELF of only 60 Hertz. All electrical circuitry at ground level there that is designed to operate on 60 Hertz alternating current would then resonate to these emissions and, like the Hubbard generators, build up enormous current flows within themselves! We can imagine that the electrical power distribution grid in the affected territory would be immediately incapacitated as circuit breakers tripped to prevent damage to the system. All large cities would be plunged into darkness and any emergency generators that produced 60 Hertz AC outputs would trip their own smaller circuit breakers or fuses. Other frequencies absorbed by the atmosphere over the affected territory's military installations could be so heavily ionized that all forms of radar would be completely jammed by reflections if they still had power to operate on. Nuclear missiles could not be fired and, even if they were, there would be no guarantee that they would reach their targets. The levels of ionization in the territory affected might be made so high that they would affect the dew points of the air so as to enshroud the land in a thick blanket of fog that blocked all forms of transportation.

Now, imagine all of the above happening to the United States during a surprise attack by the Soviet Union. In a manner similar to what happened during the great Northeastern Blackout of 1965, we can imagine the poverty stricken multitudes imprisoned in their urban centers running completely amok in a state of panic. There would be no radio or television communication and the failure of alarm and security systems would encourage widespread looting and murder. Fires would rage out of control and police would be helpless to maintain order. The federal government would lose control of the military and the latter would be helpless to respond since they have been conditioned to expect either a missile attack under well defined conditions or some sort of conventional invasion by armed forces.

At this point, Soviet agents already inside the blue pyramid would contact its former controllers and begin negotiating surrender terms! They might announce that they had already planted nuclear devices or biological/chemical weapons in our major cities and could activate them at will by radio control or suicide squads. Once the blue pyramid had accepted surrender as its only alternative, specially trained teams of red pyramid specialists would take control of all United States military installations and begin deactivating their nuclear weapons. With the citizens of the blue pyramid held hostage, all blue pyramid sea and air forces would be immediately recalled to their bases of operation to be turned over to the control of the red pyramid. Once the United States and other members of the blue pyramid were finally controlled, the red pyramid could then realize its plans for world control and domination, for whoever controlled the earth's atmosphere would automatically control its oceans and land masses...the ionosphere is the blue pyramid's ultimate "choke point"!

For the reader who may be getting very nervous after reading the above, there is this bit of good news: recently, the intelligence elite of the blue pyramid have come to realize just how vulnerable their pyramid really is and efforts are underway to develop military equipment with circuitry that can withstand brief surges of current. The official cover story is that this equipment is supposed to withstand EMP or "electromagnetic pulses" given off by nuclear detonations, but this researcher is convinced that our government's recent preoccupation with unconventional power supplies, digital components that can operate in highly ionized environments, and space based anti-missile detection systems is just the very beginning of an attempt to offset the tremendous advantage the red pyramid forces now possess because of the Tesla research papers they managed to obtain. Whether the red pyramid can be successful or not in their surprise attack ultimately comes down to how far advanced their research is and whether or not it can be executed before the blue pyramid can strike first...as readers of my past articles know, I already consider the red pyramid to be the first loser in the triad battle now being fought.

The Illuminati and the French Revolution

by Nesta H. Webster

(From a speech given by Mrs. Webster on November 30, 1920, at the Royal Artillery Institution in England.)

As Sir Hugh White-Thompson has pointed out, my particular object in coming before you this afternoon is to describe the origins of the conspiracy which I believe to be at work amongst us -- that age old conspiracy that began at least 150 years ago and of which the French Revolution of 1789 was the first manifestation.

Before the first French Revolution you have the two red forces, firstly philosophy, open and subversive doctrines disseminated by such theorists as Rousseau and Voltaire, and secondly, German Imperialism, headed by Frederick the Great, whose plan was to break the Franco-Austrian Alliance which impeded the way of Prussia to power. This struggle for power has been the policy of Prussia from that day to this. Then there are the black forces of the secret societies, notably the lodges of Grand Orient Freemasonry. This order must not be confounded with the Craft Masonry of Britain, which is in no way revolutionary, but in France Masonry had become corrupted, and throughout the 18th Century the Lodges had been centres of political intrigue. It was Grand Orient Freemasonry that first devised the formula which was current throughout the whole French Revolution "Liberty and Equality" -- a formula which sounds very peaceful but, when you think it out, is seen to be full of possibilities for discord. Think of those two words Liberty and Equality and observe where the catch comes in. You cannot have complete liberty AND equality. You can have a system of complete liberty where every man is free to behave as he pleases, to do what he will with his own, to rob or to murder, which is the law of the jungle, the law of the strongest, but there is no equality there. Or you can have a system of absolute equality such as we see being attempted to-day in Russia -- everyone cut down to the same dead level, but there is no liberty there. So, Grand Orient Freemasonry by coupling together two words for ever incompatible threw into the arena a apple of discord over which the world has never ceased to quarrel from that day to this, and which has throughout divided the revolutionary forces into two opposing camps.

But of the secret forces the most subversive was Illuminism, the Illuminism of Bavaria founded by Dr. Adam Weishaupt described by Louis Blanc as the profoundest conspirator who has ever existed. It was Weishaupt who thought out the great scheme of world revolution that we see being carried out before us to-day. For five years Weishaupt thought out his plan, which was to destroy civilisation. "Civilisation," Weishaupt held with Rousseau was all a mistake. Man should return to a state of pure nature, he must learn to be self-governing, Monarchy and all ordered Government should be swept away; private property should be abolished and inheritance likewise; patriotism, he declared "is an antiquated prejudice incompatible with universal benevolence" and that too should be done away with; marriage and all morality also should be destroyed, and, above all, every form of religion.

Weishaupt was clever enough to see that he would not induce many people to join the Order if he admitted them to the whole secret, and, therefore, people were told only half or part of his plan, Christians were told that Jesus of Nazareth was the Grand Master of the Order, and only when they were initiated into the higher grades it was admitted to them that the Order was to destroy all religion whatever. The method of Weishaupt was, by gaining adherents in all classes from Kings and Princes downwards, to get everybody to help him to co-operate in his great scheme of a "universal revolution that should deal the death blow to society."

Now, such a project, as far as we know, was unprecedented in the history of the world. Whether Weishaupt was inspired by anyone else we cannot tell; we only know that such a scheme had never been discovered before that date of 1776. Moreover, in Illuminism it is impossible to see a system of social reform; throughout the writings of Weishaupt that can be read in the original German, we find no sympathy expressed with the poor or the suffering -- nothing but the desire for world power, for domination, and the spirit of intrigue. Before long, Weishaupt realised that Freemasonry would act as an admirable mask to his design, and about 1781 he effected an alliance with the Grand Orient of France. In the following year, 1782, a huge Congress of the Secret Societies took place at Wilhelmsbad, and there Weishaupt put his plan of World Revolution before them. Soon after this the Government of Bavaria discovered the plot, and Illuminism was put down in Bavaria, but in Bavaria alone. Already it had spread to France. Mirabeau and Talleyrand inaugurated a Lodge of the Illuminati in Paris, and the Grand Orient of France then accepted the Code of Weishaupt. By the spring of 1789, 266 Lodges of the Grand Orient had been illuminised, and then the Revolution could break out.

We cannot fail to detect in the earlier outbreaks of the French Revolution a mysterious masonic organisation, famine engineered, grievances amongst the people created and exploited; but the revolutionaries were quick to see that they could bring about no real disorder as long as the troops stood firm. Thus, at the first outbreak (an attack directed against the house of a paper maker who had established a factory where several hundred workmen were employed and well paid) the troops protected the building. The revolutionaries then realised that nothing could be done unless they could seduce the army and every effort was made during the months which followed to gain the troops over to the side of the revolution. This was done by means of wine, good cheer, and the women who frequented that part of town, the Palais Royal, where the soldiers collected, and who were primed with revolutionary doctrines which they whispered into the soldiers' ears. The soldiers were also persuaded to enter the Masonic Lodges, where they were urged not to fire on their brothers in time of need. Who were those "brothers"? Mainly foreign agitators employed by the revolutionaries, brigands of all kinds enticed into Paris and paid by them. Those were the "brothers" the soldiers were asked not to fire upon.

The revolutionaries were successful in winning over a number of the troops, and the result was the fearful disorder which accompanied the siege of the Bastille. During the next three years rival intrigues held up the plan of the Illuminati, and it was not until 1792 that the great world revolution of Weishaupt began in earnest. Then with the fall of the Monarchy each point in the programme of Weishaupt was carried out in turn, the murder of the King, attacks upon all morality, attacks upon civilisation in every form, the burning of the libraries and the destruction of works of art all over France -- above all the de-Christianising of France carried out by the desecration of the churches, the stamping on the crucifix, and the casting of the Bible into the flames.

Now, who was the leader of this movement? A Prussian Baron Anacharsis Clootz, a disciple of Weishaupt, the founder of the Illuminati, and incidentally it was Clootz who was employed to preach the old doctrine of Weishaupt -- Internationalism. What did Internationalism mean? It meant then what it has meant ever since -- pro-Germanism (EDITOR: Mrs. Webster was to change her views on this in later years.); and when Clootz came forward and proposed that as soon as the French Army met the Germans they should "throw down their arms and advance towards them dancing in a friendly manner," Robespierre, who distrusted foreigners, thought it was time to cut short the career of Anacharsis Clootz and finally had him guillotined. Robespierre himself was up to a certain point an Illuminatus, but he was also, in an embryonic way, a Socialist. Robespierre aimed at equality, and his animosity was particularly directed against the Bourgeoisie and Intelligentsia. It is a great mistake to think, as many people do to-day, that the French Revolution was only directed against the Aristocrats, while in Russia it is directed against the Bourgeoisie. The last stage of the French Revolution, that is to say the reign of Terror, was directed every bit as much against the Bourgeoisie and the Intellectuals as against the Aristocracy. It was war on civilisation. Robespierre entered wholeheartedly into this scheme, and the Reign of Terror was the logical outcome of his philosophy as well as of Illuminism, for the plan was to ruin all the leisured classes and the prosperous Bourgeoisie, including the manufacturers. What was the result? That the entire industrial system was thrown out of gear, that the Republic had on their hands thousands of workers in the luxury trades -- as, for example, the silk weavers of Lyons -- with no means of employing them. Paris was filled with bands of unemployed -- hairdressers, valets, engravers, bookbinders -- all the men and women who had ministered to the needs of the leisured classes, and for which they could not find employment. This situation must always arise if you suddenly dislocate the industry of any country, because all classes are interdependent. The Republic was then faced with the fearful problem of providing for all these people. What did they do? They decided, as we know in the words of Babeuf (the Communist), that, as there was not enough "work of essential utility to go round," they must kill off that portion of the population for which they could not provide, and they calculated for this reason that the population of France must be reduced from 25,000,000 to 8,000,000 of people.

The Reign of Terror then was not directed only against the aristocracy and bourgeoisie, but also mainly against the unemployed. In the records of the period I find it stated by a Revolutionary writer (Prudhomme) that during the period of the Terror, 2,000,000 people perished both by foreign and civil war; that out of this number 300,000 were actually killed -- guillotined, drowned, or shot, --and that out of those 300,000 about 3,000 were aristocrats, the rest being middle and working class people. 500 children were killed in one butchery and 144 little seamstresses, who sewed shirts for the army, were thrown into the river at Nantes. Fortunately the revolutionaries were unable to carry out their plan to the end, and Robespierre himself was guillotined.

But, after the fall of Robespierre, a disciple was found to carry out his Socialistic doctrines and this was Babeuf. Now Babeuf was an Illuminatus and it was he who first formulated the creed of Communism as it is known to-day. Babeuf was a pure Bolshevik, and if you read the book by his colleague Buonarotti, who helped him to bring about the "Babouviste rising," you will find no difference whatever between the system planned by Babeuf and the one advocated by Lenin to-day. This consisted simply, in taking all property and placing it in the hands of the Government, which would employ everybody by means of forced labour to work for the State in return for a dole of food and clothing. Babeuf succeeded in getting a certain number of the troops to side with him, but he was careful not to tell them what his real plan was. "We thought it better," said Buonarotti, "to try to tempt the greed of the people by telling them they would have everything for their own property." They did not tell them that everything would be placed in the hands of the State, and, when Babeuf was arrested by the Government, the people saw they had been deceived and were the first to applaud his arrest and his condemnation to the guillotine.

The idea of world revolution continued all through this period, for it was Babeuf who said these words which sound so terribly prophetic to-day: "The French Revolution is only the forerunner of another Revolution very much greater, very much more solemn, and which will be the last." This idea seems to have haunted the imagination of every world revolutionary from that day to this, the idea of the great cataclysm and the final extinction of civilisation. Meanwhile Illuminism had not confined itself to France; it had spread to England and was carried over to Ireland where the United Irishmen under Wolfe Tone constructed a Society identically on the lines of that founded by Weishaupt. But when Napoleon came into power he suppressed Illuminism, and for 15 years Europe, distracted by International warfare, had peace from the fire of Illuminism.

(Editor: John Vellutini tells us: "Santa Cruz is located 80 miles south of San Francisco on the Pacific Coast. The city is bordered on one side by the Santa Cruz Mts. A friend of mine, who lived there during the time of the murders, tells me the mountains are a focal point of much negative energy and the favorite haunt of satanists and witches.")

(15) Henry Lee Lucas. Crime years: 1970s and 1980s. Convicted: In 5 murders, claims to have killed 360 people; Otis Toole was accomplice. Venue: Nationwide. ( See "Henry Lee Lucas And The Hands Of Death" in CT #6.)

(16) Herbert Mullin. Crime years: 1972-73. Convicted: In 10 slayings; former mental patient claimed murders were minor natural disasters that prevented major natural disasters. Venue: Santa Cruz area.

(19) Wayne Williams. Crime years: 1979-81. Convicted: In two slayings; may have killed 28 others. Venue: Atlanta area. (Editor: Williams could be a scapegoat. Some believe, such as Roy Innis of CORE, that the murders were perpetrated by a witch-cult, possibly WICCA. Others point to the murders as a CIA operation. Both WICCA and the CIA are patched in at the top to Scottish Rite Freemasonry.)

(20) Randall B. Woodfield. Convicted: In one murder and one attempted murder in 1981; may have killed or raped up to 46 women. Venue: West Coast.

(21) Zodiac Killer. Crime years: 1966-74. Convicted: Never caught, but suspected in at least six and possibly 37 slayings. He wrote many letters and cryptograms to police and newspapers, boasting of his crimes. Venue: California, Nevada, Oregon.

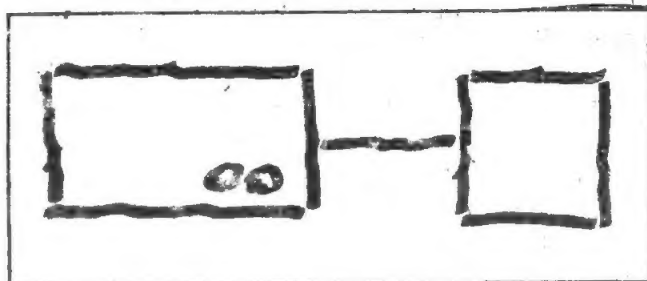

Editor: John Vellutini has supplied CT with an article from the San Francisco Examiner of April 23, 1975, whose headline says: ZODIAC THEORY: WITCHCRAFT IN 30-40 SLAYINGS. The article is reprinted below: SANTA ROSA -- There is a pattern to some 30 to 40 random slayings of young women and girls in California and five other western states, pointing to one of the most terrifying and destructive mass killers in history, lawmen here believe.

Sonoma County Sheriff Don Striepeke says this is a killer who "makes Juan Corona look like a piker." (Corona was convicted in 1973 of killing 25 migrants in the Yuba City area.) Striepeke has called representatives of 50 Northern California news agencies to a news conference here Friday morning and intends to divulge details of the killers pattern then. The sheriff believes the killer of young women may be the Zodiac, chalking up victims as he claimed he would in taunting messages to the police. In his last letter, mailed in January 1974, Zodiac claimed 37 victims. Police have accounted for six.

San Francisco cab driver Paul Stine was the last victim that Zodiac ever identified. He said after that killing that he would go on killing but would not help police by identifying his victims.

The killer, whoever he is, is a maniac, may be a student of witchcraft and may believe, as the Zodiac, that his victims will be his slaves in the afterlife, the sheriff said. Striepeke has prepared a press kit which includes a photograph of a symbol found at a remote site where three of 6 victims were dumped near Santa Rosa in 1972 and 1973. Detective Sergeant Erwin (Butch) Carlstedt, the investigator who developed the mass-murderer theory for the sheriff, claims the symbol is from ancient English witchcraft. Formed with twigs and rocks at the side of a narrow road, the mark consisted of a rectangle (with two

WAS MARK LEFT BY TWIGS AND STONES WITCHCRAFT?

This is a sign meaning "to carry the souls away, to take them into paradise," Carlstedt said. Striepeke says the symbol used to be put on the hearth in the homes of the deceased in England to "speed the deceased to the afterlife." Zodiac has written of his intended random victims as "slaves I will collect for my afterlife," Striepeke pointed out.

Carlstedt, who was assigned to investigate the six unsolved female homicides in Sonoma County in 1972 and 1973, has found a trail of killings which he believes may be the Zodiac's ultimate taunt at lawmen. He sees striking similarities between some 28 Northern California murders of girls and women aged 12-24, he said. He has traveled to the Seattle area where 10 young women, most of them college and university students, disappeared in 1974. Skeletal remains of seven were found recently, dumped in two remote, forested sites some 25 miles from Seattle. "There's no doubt in my mind," he said, that the same man who killed the six in Sonoma County killed the young women in Washington State. Yesterday, Carlstedt was in Salt Lake City, where two young women have been found dead, apparently victims of a random killer, and where two others are still missing. He planned to go from there to Grand Junction, Vail and Aspen, Colo., where there have been similar murders.

Carlstedt is obsessed by the trail of lifeless young bodies and skeletons and has speculated that the killer is sketching an enormous clue across a map of the western states. When traced on a map, the trail forms the first two thirds of a giant "Z", perhaps the signature of the Zodiac killer, called "Mr. Z" by Carlstedt. If the detective is right, the trail will soon point north once more.

MURDER TRAIL RUNS FROM SANTA ROSA TO SEATTLE TO SALT LAKE CITY TO NEW MEXICO. IS THE KILLER PLANNING TO GO NORTH FOR HIS NEXT VICTIM, MAKING A HORIZONTAL Z PATTERN?

Four of the murders Carlstedt and Striepeke include in their pattern occurred in San Francisco between May and July 1973. San Francisco homicide inspectors, though, are not prepared to accept the theory of a lone killer. There are similarities, they say, but there are also differences. Seattle authorities, who have 11 detectives on the random killings there, have sent a team to Sonoma County to compare their killings with those near Santa Rosa. They have not been able to establish any direct connection between the two series of crimes, they said.

Carlstedt includes murders in 11 Northern California counties, dating back to the Judith Williamson murder in Albany in 1963, in his list of killings that fit a pattern. The detective claims to have noted patterns in area and periods of time for unsolved female homicides in Northern California. For a time in 1969 and early 1970, there were a number of killings and disappearances in Contra Costa County. In March, September, October and November of 1970 and June and October of 1971, there were a series of killings or disappearances in an area stretching from Sacramento to the Lake Tahoe area. Sonoma County and San Francisco had a proliferation of such cases in 1972 and 1973.

The last known Sonoma County killing was in December 1973, Carlstedt noted, and the first disappearance in the Seattle area was the next month. (Editor: Convicted murderer Tom Creech -- "The Death Angel" -- said that he attended Satanist meetings in a Seattle suburb. Seattle is also the territory of the Green River Killer. For more on Creech, see CT #6.)

The first there was Linda Marie Healy. Her remains were found with those of young women apparently abducted in April, June and May of that year. Carlstedt notes striking similarities among the victims he includes on his list: They were nude. With the exception of an occasional piece of jewelry, their clothing and belongings were not found. They were killed at one place, then dumped elsewhere. (Editor: A tactic also employed by Jack the Ripper.) The bodies were found in remote areas and often appeared to have been thrown from the side of the road. The killer is believed to be strong, capable of lifting a woman above his head and tossing her over several yards of bushes.

Inspector John McKenna of San Francisco's homicide bureau, a non-believer in the theory, described in awe the finding of 20 year-old Rosa Vasquez's nude body sprawled atop some bushes in Golden Gate Park May 29, 1973. "The thing that hit me about Vasquez was that the guy must have been an awfully powerful person to have thrust her this far into the shrubs. She was seven feet off the road and it was as if she had sailed through the air and just came sprawling down. (Editor: An observation also made at cattle mutilation sites.) The bodies of five of the six Sonoma County victims were disposed of in the same fashion. The sixth may have been thrown into the creek in which her body was found.

Edmund Kemper, the Santa Cruz giant convicted of the dismemberment slayings of six co-ed hitchhikers, his mother and her best friend, has been eliminated by Carlstedt as a suspect in these slayings.

In Sonoma, two victims were found Dec. 28, 1972, off the side of Franz Valley Rd. Seven months later, a third was found in the same spot. She had been dead two weeks. Carlstedt notes the similarity between this re-use of a dumping site and the case in Seattle. One of the most chilling questions of all is what happens to the victim's clothing and property. In Seattle, lawmen spent 1300 man hours on hands and knees search of 4 million square feet around the spot where the remains of four women were found. They found nothing but the four sets of skulls and jawbones.

In Sonoma, officers searched 100 miles of isolated roadway one day looking for the belongings of a victim. "We didn't even find a shoe or a sock," said Striepeke. What is the killer doing with the belongings of the young women. "Putting them in a shrine somewhere," suggested the sheriff.

Report From The Readers

FROM ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

I have been wanting to write to you with what I feel I may have learned about time and space travel. I formulated this idea -- with what I remember reading about what Uri Geller has stated -- and after reading and studying the book "Ice: The Ultimate Disaster" by Richard W. Noone. One of the keys of time and space travel may be the mass of the structure of the pyramids around the world and on the planets of our solar system. I feels that pyramids have and will be used again by the entities of darkness to enter into our planetary system in conjunction with the Sirius system. I had read some time ago a statement by Uri Geller that there are even pyramids on the Moon and other planets of our system, and that he was fearful of pyramids -- and he also said that they were evil. I hope that this theory may help you in your work.

Editor: See CT #4 for more on the pyramids.

CONSPIRACY NOTES

(1) ZUNDEL TRIAL. (From the Toronto Sun of Jan. 15, 1985.) Metro Police Staff-Sgt. Roy Bassett -- a 22-year member of the Masons -- yesterday told the Ernest Zundel trial that Masons aren't secretive despite their secret passwords, oaths, handshakes and closed meetings. Zundel, 46, a printer and commercial artist who has a home and office on Carlton St., has pleaded not guilty to two counts of publishing false statements likely to cause racial and social intolerance. Bassett, known as the Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret because of his rank as a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason, repeatedly refused to disclosed these secrets on the witness stand. "I'm not free to tell you," he told defence lawyer Douglas Christie of British Columbia, who asked if he'd sworn an oath that included accepting having his tongue torn out if he disclosed Masonic secrets. The goal of Masons is "to practice charity, to make good men better and certainly to live a lawful life," said Bassett, who belongs to a Blue Lodge in Scarborough. One of Zundel's pamphlets, "Did Six Million Really Die", disputes the number of Jews who died in the Holocaust. The other, "The West, War and Islam", claims Freemasons, Zionists, bankers and communists are involved in a world conspiracy to put Jews in positions of power to further Zionist goals. The latter pamphlet says most Western decision-makers are Masons. It says Masons have a "consistent role in directing the advance of world crime, corruption, poverty, war, revolution, collapse and chaos." Bassett admitted that higher ranking Masons hold secrets from the lower ranks. He said all his information concerning Masons came from lodge publications. He said one of the Mason symbols is a Star of David, that many passwords are Jewish and that many symbols were taken from biblical references to King Solomon's temple. Another witness was Ignatz Fulop, 58, of Toronto, a Hungarian-Jewish survivor of several Nazi concentration camps, including Auschwitz. He told of many horrors, including seeing a blind man and his crazy daughter clubbed to death by a "kapo," a Jewish privileged prisoner under orders of the SS. (Our thanks to Michael A. Hoffman II for providing us with this piece.)

(2) DRUG WAR UPDATE. E. Edwin Austin of the Mutilation Data Center reports: There is a new, potentially dangerous, event in the Nazi drug smuggling war. The Reagan drug war is rapidly cutting off activity in the producing areas such as Columbia, Peru, Chile, Bolivia and others. The effect is to force the primary refining activity back into Paraguay. Paraguayan President Alfredo Stroessner is identified in countless media items as the open protector of such as Mengle, Bormann, Barbie and other high level Hitler officials charged with war crimes. I made this group and their descendants to be the organizing and controlling agency in drug traffic as long as two years ago. CT published some of the material. In September, 1984, Paraguayan Customs officials siezed a very large shipment of cocaine-related chemicals that "far exceeded" Paraguay's needs. I believe the siezure was CIA engineered. If so, I applaud them for a nicely done job. This is the way CIA and other military agencies ought to work. The U.S. Government put intense pressure on the Stroessner Government to destroy the chemicals. Stroessner refuses to destroy them or discuss the matter. Brazilian and U.S. officials tied high level Paraguayan officials into drug traffic. Reagan officials openly speculate about the possibility of Paraguayan Government involvement in drug traffic. (New York Times article, published in the Register, Santa Ana, California, Jan 3, 1985.) Now the wife of U.S. Ambassador to Paraguay, Marian Davis, turns up dead in a weird plane accident in the high Andes, in the middle of a storm. The weather prevented normal rescue/investigation techniques. But a private Andinist party climbed to the site during the worst of the storm -- then suddenly withdrew "because of bad weather" after the storm subsided....apparently without finding the plane's "black box." Now the media has mysteriously fallen silent, including even the slightest speculation about a possible connection between U.S. displeasure with Stroessner and Mrs. Davis's death. When you consider that the death plane originated from the Capitol of Paraguay, one would think somebody, somewhere, would call for a more than normally careful investigation. But silence? This thing has so many possibilities that it beggars the imagination. Are we heading for war with Paraguay over drugs? Or did Reagan get so badly burned in Grenada -- propaganda notwithstanding -- that he is wary of taking Paraguay. Or are they studying the black box after all and waiting to make an announcement? When an Andinist crew, world-famous for their mountain exploits and rescues, climbs to the crash site during the worst of a storm, then withdraws "because of bad weather" after the storm subsides, it seems legitimate to assume something off center.

(3) UFO IN MINSK. (From the New York Daily News, Jan. 31, 1985.) Moscow (UPI) -- The crew and passengers of a Soviet airliner flying at night over Minsk saw a mysterious flying object that sent beams of light to the ground below, the newspaper Trud said yesterday. "The pilots saw what appeared to be a large, unblinking star suddenly shed a thin ray of light which fell plumb down on the ground," Trud said. "It (the UFO) then flared up, leaving a green cloud in its stead," the report said without giving a date for the incident. "The green cloud then dropped straight down below the altitude at which the airliner was cruising, then climbed up again in a similar fashion, positioning itself right opposite the plane at a height of (30,000 feet) and accompanying it in this way till the end of the flight (to Latvia) like an honorary escort," the pilot said.
